Bucko Ruckus came together in late 2001 with the joining of four friends that have worked together in similar projects in the past. Each individual member has been influenced by an eclectic group of artists but together they gravitate around original Texas music spanning from Americana, Alt-Country, Rock-n-Roll, Blues, Folk and everything in between. Together they have established a unique sound while remaining deep rooted in the music that inspires many. Their shows are lively and energetic and they have the ability to produce crowd pleasing original songs such as the upbeat southern-fried "I'll Drink To That" which offers a solution for the downsides of life. Country roots shine through in "Come Back To Me" which is a simple melodic song about missing a passed loved one and "Ghost in My House" which tells a ghost tale from a slightly different perspective. Another crowd pleaser is "Rosie (The Hooker Song)" which is a peek inside the life of a lonely prostitute. Most of their songs deal with real life issues with an occasional trip to the imagination.

"The guys in Bucko Ruckus are very Gracious and deserve our supports...they did a great job opening for the Gary P. Nunn show"

Bucko Ruckus has had the pleasure of working with acts such as Gary P. Nunn, Bill Pekar, Big John Mills & The Texas Road Dawgs, Honeybrowne, Local Folk, Kenefick, The Gringos, The Heymakers, The Lost Trailers and more. Thus far they have only focused on the Houston area playing such venues as Blanco's, The Firehouse, Walters, The Rhythm Room, The 19th Hole, Old Quarter Acoustic Café, Dan Electro's Guitar Bar, JP Hops House, Sidecar Pub, and others. This band is building momentum and has a great live act...be sure to see their next live show.
